NOTES

25X1

[Brazil: Student demonstrators, defying a government ban on protest marches, clashed with Sao Paulo security forces yesterday and reportedly are looking for more trouble. They have occupied a university building and are prepared to resist if police try to eject them, and could take to the streets again today. Sao Paulo security forces, already nervous after many recent terrorist bombings, are likely to respond sharply. Although most students are on vacation, harsh measures could renew the cycle of student provocation and police repression that has already shaken the government. This might cause President Costa e Silva again to consider declaring at least a local state of siege. ]
